Outsourcing in the supply chain of logistics teams may sound farfetched. After all, outsourcing typically refers to sending jobs overseas. Yet in outsourced logistics simply refers to hiring a third-party logistics service, 3PL, to handle the logistics services. From securing inventory to transporting goods from Point A to Point B, 3PL are taking over as in-house logistics teams fall flat. Two of the most prominent businesses in the USA are following this movement—Target and Justin Brand.

B. Third Party Logistics Services

The main reason that using a 3PL service for a brand, big or small, is that outsourced logistics frees up a business to focus on what they know best. After all, unless a business is in the business of logistics, then it is not a forte that comes naturally. As organizations grow and expand the reality is that they are unable to keep up with the constant changes and evolutions of the logistics world. The same goes for the marketing sector and IT departments. While in-house departments were once sufficient to handle the tech, marketing and distribution needs of a company, the expansion created by globalization and the Internet has changed all of that.

Benefits of a 3PL

According to Supply Chain 24/7 the four main reasons why businesses are turning to 3PL are:

- Overall cost for supply chain
- Flexibility and adaptability
- Capital investment and ongoing expansion needs
- Improvement of service levels due to a dedicated logistics provider

For businesses, such as Target and Justin Brands, that have a global reach there is the vital necessity to make the supply chain a success. As noted in the recent supply chain catastrophe of the Canadian Target stores, a supply chain with a kink will break a business in a very short period of time. By outsourcing the logistics of a supply chain, a company can turn to the professionals for tackling the ins and outs of inventory, warehousing, transportation and distribution. Having an expert team of logistics providers working for a business can be the boost it needs to advance to the next level.

Supply Chain Satisfaction

As noted by Inbound Logistics more and more businesses are moving toward outsourced logistics and the use of third-party logistics companies to handle their supply chain needs. In a IL survey the results showed that 93 percent of businesses utilized inbound logistics services. Warehousing was another popular category of 3PL usage with 86 percent noting they also used this service. The trucking industry is another faction that responds well to 3PL, given the increase of freight opportunities from LTL to long haul due to 3PL. Having a 3PL provider handling logistics and transportation functions streamlines the efficiency for both shippers who move thousands of pounds of freight every day. Overall, the benefits of going 3PL are exponentially increasing thanks to the growth of globalization and the increased supply and demand of consumer goods in the US.

Our 3PL support, which does not insist on in-house assets, constructs and operates systems which perfectly match the needs of the customer. We take care of a wide range of tasks to enable our customers to concentrate on their own strategic business. These include logistics operations, and logistics planning, management and improvements.
